SUMMARY:
The Outreach Worker (ORW) works in the Crisis Stabilization Unit (which is part of the Emergency Services Unit). The ORW works in a variety of ways to provide one-on-one support to individuals experiencing a mental health crisis. Outreach work includes: medication delivery and observation, transportation of clients, social support, and providing support and supervision of clients at Recovery House. Duties include providing culturally competent services in whatever way the individual and his or her providers deem necessary and appropriate in order to assist them in getting through a difficult time, with special emphasis on consumer involvement and empowerment. The ORW works both on an on-call, as-needed basis and may also work scheduled shifts in the Recovery House program. The ORW must be able to provide companionship and support to people in distress, model appropriate social interactions and coping skills, assist clients in identifying natural support systems and help with linking clients to ongoing community-based resources. The ORW will work collaboratively, as a member of team that includes the client, Emergency Services Unit staff and other community providers. The ORW is committed to providing services that value diversity, are inclusive and promote cultural competence. The Crisis Stabilization Program Manager supervises the ORW. Staff must be available for 4 shifts per month including 2 weekend shifts.
