Madison, WI

The UW-Madison School of Social Work, Social Work with Communities and Organizations course students will be exhibiting their PhotoVoice projects on April 29th in the Wisconsin Capitol Rotunda.

What is PhotoVoice?

PhotoVoice is an innovative method which sheds light on social issues and problems through the medium of photography. Photos create narratives examining the issues with the intent of sparking community action.
Exhibits

Among the array of concerns which will be highlighted are the following which affect people in our university, city, county, state, and country:

Older Adults and HIV/AIDS
This project hopes to break the stereotypes regarding older persons and sexuality, especially those living with AIDS/HIV. What are the experiences of these elders?

College Student Binge Drinking
Binge drinking on campus is epidemic. What are the causes and effects?

Diversity on the UW-Madison Campus
Diversity is strength. How diverse is UW-Madison? How can it be more so?

Differently Abled/ Not Disabled
The term “disability” can be stigmatizing. How can we acknowledge the strengths of those who are “differently abled?”

Teenage Parenting
Wisconsin has one of the highest rates of teenage pregnancy. What is the plight of the teenage parent?

The Quality of Low-Cost Housing in Dane County
Affordable housing in Dane County is an obstacle for some citizens. What are the current circumstances?

Sexual Assault
How widespread is this devastating crime? What multi-layered factors are involved?

Hunger
Food shelters provide food to the needy who are predominantly children. Will they eat food that is not a part of their culture?

Domestic Violence
Victims stay. Why can’t they “just leave” their abusive relationships?

Accessibility in Madison
Accessibility is a right for all citizens. How can Madison make signs and buildings more inclusive of differently abled people?
