The Juneteenth flag flies over the UW-Madison campus for the first time, summer 2021; Events, such as the Social Workers Confronting Racial Injustice Conference, continued virtually.
As I write this in early fall 2021, we are excited to welcome both new and returning students to the Sandra Rosenbaum School of Social Work. At the same time, campus leadership is keeping a close eye on the spread of the Delta variant, and the need to protect faculty, staff, students, and our community. That protection includes both mask and testing mandates on campus.

We are entering the third academic year impacted by the pandemic. I am in awe of what has been accomplished due to the resilience of our students and the dedication of our faculty, staff, and community partners. Despite the challenges of the last year and a half, we graduated 182 amazing students in 2021. Our faculty continued or pivoted their robust research projects, and indeed new research projects were initiated to address the social, health, and economic inequities laid bare by Covid-19. Our outstanding field education office secured valuable field experiences for students in hundreds of community agencies, relying on the commitment and creativity of our community agencies, agency supervisors, and alumni.

I’m happy to celebrate many of our accomplishments in the pages here – accomplishments that are notable in and of themselves, let alone that they occurred during a pandemic. Please read further about these and other accomplishments and celebratory moments:

• In July 2020, we celebrated our new name: The Sandra Rosenbaum School of Social Work thanks to the generosity of Joel Berman who honored his late wife and our graduate, Sandra.
• Building upon our ongoing work to improve diversity, equity, and inclusion in the school, we refined and began implementing a Strategic Plan for Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion.
• We prepared for reaffirmation of our BSW and MSW programs by the Council on Social Work Education and are awaiting final approval for our reaccreditation.
• We created and implemented a second day of orientation for students focused entirely on Justice, Equity, Diversity, and Inclusion (JEDI Training). The goal is to jumpstart the learning and skills development of our students from day one.
• We hosted our 7th annual conference on Social Workers Confronting Racial Injustice. For the first time, we hosted the conference virtually, with nearly 5,000 registered for the first day and over 4,000 registered for the second.
• The Office of Field Education offered synchronous and asynchronous workshops for agency supervisors to support ongoing learning and growth for the professionals that commit themselves to training our students, even during unprecedented times.

Despite the pandemic, and I daresay because of the pandemic, our school’s mission cannot be put on hold. We need more, strong social workers serving our communities, and we need robust, faculty research that can address the ongoing and urgent inequities facing society. We have amazing students, faculty, staff, and community partners. But frankly, we could not accomplish our goals during these challenging times without the support of our alumni and partners. From critical student scholarships, to support for enhanced programming, to funds for emergent critical research, our alumni and supporters make it possible for us to keep going. If you are reading this message, THANK YOU for your interest, dedication, and support for the school during this challenging time. We couldn’t do this without you.

Sincerely,

Stephanie Robert, Director and Professor
SOCIAL WORK FACULTY CONDUCT RESEARCH FOR THE WISCONSIN DEPARTMENT OF CHILDREN AND FAMILIES

New Agreement Continues a Long-term Partnership

Social work faculty have had a long-standing partnership with Wisconsin’s Department of Children and Families (DCF) to provide research on topics that affect children and families, with a focus on child support. A recent $5.3 million research agreement, coordinated through UW-Madison’s Institute for Research on Poverty (IRP), supports 18 projects. “This research continues a collaborative process in which research has influenced state policy,” says Professor and Co-Principal Investigator Dan Meyer.

In addition to six social work faculty projects described below, funding is provided for current doctoral students and several alumni including: David Pate (Chair of the Helen Bader School of Social Welfare at UW–Milwaukee), Molly Costanzo, Lisa Klein Vogel, and Hilary Shager (all at IRP), Laura Cuesta (Rutgers University) and Judi Bartfeld (Affiliate in the school and Professor of Consumer Science).

ALEJANDRA ROS PILARZ and TOVA WALSH each have projects examining aspects of the effects of the Covid-19 pandemic: Pilarz is working with Laura Cuesta, from the Rutgers University School of Social Work, to consider effects on child support processes and on the income packages of custodial parents. Walsh is examining effects on noncustodial fathers, many of whom were economically vulnerable prior to the pandemic.

TAWANDRA ROWELL-CUNSOLO will study the child support behaviors of noncustodial parents who have substance use disorders, and whether treatment affects payments.

JOOYOUNG KONG is working with DAN MEYER (and Maria Cancian, Dean of Georgetown University’s McCourt School of Public Policy) to explore whether those who received child support when they were children have different outcomes as young adults.

LONNIE BERGER is working with Professor Judi Bartfeld to examine how divorced families whose children spend approximately half their time with each of their parents split child-related expenses.

DAN MEYER is also exploring the characteristics of those not paying their child support and the role of procedural justice in child support agency practices.

MARAH CURTIS is providing consulting to the project.
Since 2009, more than 700 students have received their MSW degrees in the school’s Part-Time MSW program, which included required meetings every Saturday on campus. Our new hybrid-model, utilizing increased distance-learning opportunities, will mean students need to come to campus only every other Saturday. Since the program has always intended to meet the needs of students who, due to work, family, or other commitments, require flexibility to complete their graduate work, the hybrid-model will allow even more students to pursue their graduate education. Offering focus areas in aging; child, youth, and family welfare; health; and mental health allows students the flexibility to pursue a wide range of interests and societal needs. Field placements in or near the student’s home community, and financial aid including scholarships are drawing students from throughout Wisconsin and neighboring states. Recent grads Ashley Osteen and Samantha Tyler reflect on their time in the program:

“I love the flexibility of the Part-Time Program, especially since it has allowed me to continue working in the Eau Claire, WI area while also receiving a high-quality education from a UW-Madison program...I knew I wanted to get an MSW, but neither relocating for a full-time program nor doing a fully online program felt like the best option for me. The Part-Time Program is a blessing because it is the perfect option for students and professionals like me, who don’t feel like they “fit” into a traditional master’s program.”
- ASHELY OSTEEN

“I have had the best experience while in the Part-Time MSW Program due to having full support from my field instructor and by creating close connections with my smaller cohort.”
- SAMANTHA TYLER

More information about the Part-Time MSW Program can be found at socwork.wisc.edu/programs/parttime

The school has been in the process of creating and implementing a Strategic Plan for Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion for several years, building upon and furthering earlier efforts. The uprisings of 2020 only magnified the importance of this work. In addition to a newly launched summer event series and resources for Supporting Black Lives, the school focused on equity work as the main priority in 2020-2021 with material and substantive progress made in a number of areas. See: socwork.wisc.edu/striving-for-equity

A new grant will provide four semesters of funding for school psychology EdS students and MSW students interested in school social work and mental health. Project LEADSS (Leading Educators to Advance School-Based Services in Mental Health) is a federally-funded training grant, prepared in part by Amanda Ngola, Clinical Associate Professor; Associate Director of Field Education, and Audrey Conn, Clinical Associate Professor; Director of Field Education. The program is focused on preparing students in school mental health (SMH) practices, supervision, and leadership of interdisciplinary teams.
MEGAN MERCIER A TRUMAN SCHOLARSHIP FINALIST

The Truman Scholarship is one of the most prestigious undergraduate honors in the country. Social Welfare major Megan Mercier, who returned to UW-Madison after 15 years, is the founder of Holism for All—a program connecting low-income families with affordable healthcare options. A mother of two, Megan is an advocate for victims of domestic violence, public speaker, author, and filmmaker.

BETH ALLEN NAMED NEWMAN CIVIC FELLOW

Nominated by UW’s Chancellor, Rebecca Blank, undergraduate social work and political science major Beth Allen was named a Newman Civic Fellow. Fellows are recognized for their “leadership to address public issues and commitment to finding solutions for challenges facing communities throughout the country.” Beth’s experiences working at the Morgridge Center for Public Service and the Wisconsin Governor’s Office have helped inform and reinforce her passion for voter engagement and social justice.

KILEY MCLEAN SELECTED FOR LEADERSHIP ACADEMY

PhD student Kiley McLean was one of 24 participants throughout the country selected to join the Association of University Centers on Disabilities Leadership Academy. Kiley will engage in a year-long program intended to enhance the skills of current and emerging leaders in the disability academic network to build coalitions to improve systems of supports and services for people with disabilities.

PHD STUDENT LIZ PREMO RECOGNIZED FOR TEACHING EXCELLENCE

UW-Madison has more than 2,100 teaching assistants who are a crucial part of the campus’s instructional program. Liz was one of only 35 TAs recognized for their outstanding teaching. In addition to her TA role, Liz has taught two courses as an independent instructor: Basic Statistics for Social Workers; and Child, Youth, & Family Policies & Services.

SAKARA WAGES RETURNS TO TEACH AT HER ALMA MATER

Fourth year doctoral student Sakara Wages was featured in a Madison 365 article describing her return to teach at UW-Platteville. Sakara is one of only two Black alumni who have returned to teach there in the last 10 years. Her interests include anti-racist pedagogy, Black feminist theory, and black family welfare. She explains, “Coming back to UW-Platteville made sense for a number of reasons. When I started this journey, my dream was myopically to come back and be a tenured professor at UW-Platteville because I really enjoyed the environment...my family is here... so Platteville is going to be home.”

DOMINIQUE CHRISTIAN: A WOMEN TO WATCH

Recent MSW grad Dominique Christian was named a 2021 Women to Watch by Brava Magazine. Dominique, who “has experienced...trauma in her childhood and adulthood, including poverty and homelessness” explains that “this accumulation of pain and hardship has led her down a fierce and passionate path to serve the Black community.” In addition to
One of the benefits students derive is the opportunity to work collaboratively on research projects with faculty. An example of this resulted in a recent publication: “Caregiving for Parents Who Harmed You: A Conceptual Review,” which appeared recently in the Clinical Gerontologist.

The authors included two students. Anne Kunze, a recent MSW graduate, and Jamie Goldberg, a doctoral student, joined school faculty members Jooyoung Kong and Tracy Schroepfer on the project. Their paper provides, “a conceptual review of prior research on the effect of a history of parental childhood maltreatment on the experiences and outcomes of adult-child caregivers who provide care to their perpetrating parents.”

“I hadn’t considered research when I entered the part-time program, being more focused on learning interpersonal skills and interventions,” Anne said. “What I found out working alongside Professor Kong and Jaime on the paper was the importance of being open to unexpected opportunities and lessons. Researching broadened my perspective, and for that I’m grateful.”

As lead author, Assistant Professor Jooyoung Kong explains, “Both Anne and Jaime were interested in the topic of caregiving for formerly abusive and neglectful parents and they had done a thorough literature review on this topic under my guidance. They came up with the list of existing literature on this topic and we did weekly meetings to discuss and share knowledge and insights that they learned by reading the prior studies. This paper was written as a product of our collaborations.”

working for The Road Home, an organization that serves homeless families, she founded AYA Advocacy Group as a multi-pronged organization where she aims to empower marginalized communities with supports and resources for kids, teens and adults.

PHD STUDENT LEAH AWKWARD-RICH WAS RECOGNIZED with an Equity & Inclusion Student Fellowship from the Association for Public Policy Analysis & Management. The fellowship supports the travel and participation of students at the APPAM Fall Research Conference.

LB KLEIN JOINS THE FACULTY
LB Klein has joined the faculty as an assistant professor. She received her PhD from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. LB brings more than 16 years of experience in preventing and responding to interpersonal violence and advancing social justice to her teaching and research. Her research focuses on “sexual and intimate partner violence prevention and intervention, with particular interests in intersectionality and approaches to enhancing Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender, Queer+ health.”

PROFESSORS LONNIE BERGER AND KRISTI SLACK EDIT A SPECIAL ISSUE OF THE ANNALS OF THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF POLITICAL AND SOCIAL SCIENCE ON CHILD MALTREATMENT
Selected because of their expertise as scholars in the area of child welfare services, Lonnie Berger (also Associate Vice-Chancellor for Research and Graduate Education for the Social Sciences), and Kristi Slack, were guest editors of Toward a Better Approach to Preventing, Identifying and Addressing Child Maltreatment. In addition to drawing on the work of child welfare scholars throughout the country, their lead article “Contemporary U.S. Child Welfare System(s): Overview and Key Challenges” aims to increase awareness among scholars, policy-makers, and practitioners of the size, scope, and functions of child welfare services in the United States.

TAWANDRA ROWELL-CUNSOLO SELECTED FOR INTERDISCIPLINARY RESEARCH PROGRAM
Assistant Professor Tawandra Rowell-Cunsolo has been selected to participate in the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation's Interdisciplinary Research Program. The program “connects changemakers across the country—from every profession and field—to learn from and work with one another in creating more just and thriving communities.” Tawandra and her team members will examine the impact of paternal involvement in the criminal justice system on child and community health.

KRISTI SLACK ELECTED TO THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF SOCIAL WORK AND SOCIAL WELFARE
Professor Kristi Slack was one of 12 individuals nationally selected as a fellow into the American Academy of Social Work and Social Welfare (AASWSW). The Academy recognizes those with distinguished accomplishments as scholars and practice and policy leaders dedicated to achieving excellence in high-impact work to advance social good. Kristi joins colleagues Dan Meyer, Lonnie Berger, Katherine Magnuson, and Stephanie Robert who were elected in prior years.

THE LAB FOR FAMILY WELLBEING AND JUSTICE
Assistant Professor Pajarita Charles’ research centers on the development, implementation, and testing of family-focused preventive interventions to promote positive outcomes for children and families affected by the criminal justice system. She has developed The Lab for Family Wellbeing and Justice, which supports a number of projects designed to combat the adverse consequences of justice involvement for individuals, families, and communities thereby promoting strength, resilience, opportunity, and success.

ALEJANDRA ROS PILARZ’S WORK FUNDED BY RUSSELL SAGE AND THE BILL & MELINDA GATES FOUNDATIONS
Assistant Professor Alejandra Ros Pilarz and her colleague Laura Cuesta of Rutgers University received a “Pipeline Grant” to support their work, “Child Support Regularity and Custodial Mothers’ Employment and Economic Well-Being.” Their project will study how regularity in child support receipt has changed over the past twenty years and the extent to which regularity affects custodial mothers’ employment and economic well-being.

TOM CORBETT PUBLISHES NEW EDITION ON EVIDENCE-BASED POLICYMAKING
Professor Emeritus Tom Corbett and Karen Bogenshneider have reworked their well-received 2011 volume on Evidence Based Policymaking: Envisioning a New Era of Theory, Research, Teaching and Practice.

In Memoriam

EMERITUS PROFESSOR MARY WYLIE
Professor Emerita Mary Wylie, 94, passed away recently in Sun City, AZ. Mary’s research and teaching focused on gerontology and community and social planning. She also served as head of the Social Research, Policy, and Practice Section of the American Gerontological Society of America.

Much of Mary’s research related to services and supports for older people moving to new communities. It is therefore fitting that she lived the last 29 years of her life at Sun City along with many of her longtime friends including social work professor Vivian Wood now 98, who was able to be with her the day she died.
THE DOCTORAL PROGRAM IN SOCIAL WELFARE

Though the smallest of the school’s four programs, the doctoral program in social welfare has a large impact on the social work profession, social welfare policy, and intervention strategies from a behavioral and social science perspective to improve the quality of life of individuals, families, groups, communities, and organizations. The program has a strong national reputation for academic excellence.

Since its inception in 1967, more than 240 students have received their PhDs, many of whom have gone on to make major contributions in their areas of expertise. Currently, 26 students are taking advantage of the PhD program’s interdisciplinary plan of study in basic and applied social research. In the program, doctoral students build and integrate knowledge in:

1. a substantive or social problem area (e.g., child welfare, aging, developmental disabilities, end-of-life care, health, mental health, poverty);
2. social science theory (e.g., theories of the life course, economic theory, psychopathology, organizational theory, stress process theories);
3. research designs and statistical methodologies (e.g., program evaluation, policy analysis, longitudinal analysis)

In addition to their social work courses, students draw on courses in UW-Madison’s world-renowned social and behavioral science departments. Perhaps the most rewarding part of the program is the close working relationship doctoral students develop with their faculty mentors. Recent grad Julie Yixia Cai, now at Columbia University, commenting on her work with faculty members Lonnie Berger and Kristi Slack, explains: “Without them, I could not have gotten to where I am now. They introduced me to the world of child welfare research. The countless conversations I had with them really sparked my interest in bridging research on preventing child maltreatment with the social policy arena and in understanding further how economic (in)stability plays a role in understanding family and child wellbeing.”

As an example of our doctoral students’ work and interests, below are the dissertation topics of several recent doctoral program grads:

The Interplay Between Adverse and Positive Childhood Experiences: An Exploration of Risk and Resilience. Marissa Abbot

Caring for Parents: Stratified Effects on Adult Children’s Labor Force Participation. Melody Waring

Reentry and Family Reunification: Essays Examining Children’s Well-being after Incarcerated Parents are Released from Prison. Luke Muentner

Examining Access to and Participation in Early Care and Education among Children of Immigrant. Ying-Chun Lin

Perspective Taking by Dementia Family Caregivers: A Multi-method Study of how proxy Reporters Assess Quality of Life in Dementia. Patricia Egan

Queering Pregnancy: Understanding the Role of Queer Identity in Pregnancy Desires and Decisions. Emma Carpenter

Donor funds are used to support doctoral students in presenting their research at professional conferences and to provide small grants to those needing funds to conduct their dissertation research.
The Board of Visitors chose Celena Roldán as the school’s 2021 Distinguished Alumni Award Recipient. Celena is the Chief Executive Officer of the American Red Cross of Illinois. As the second largest Red Cross region in the country, it annually serves 12 million people and responds to more than 1,600 disasters, while collecting more than 100,000 lifesaving units of blood. Prior to joining the Red Cross, Celena served as the Executive Director of the five locations of the Erie Neighborhood House in Chicago, founded in 1870 to strengthen low-income, primarily Latino families through skill-building, access to critical resources, advocacy, and collaborative action.

Recognizing her leadership, Celena was named one of Chicago’s “Most Powerful Latinos.” Her extensive community involvement includes co-chairing Chicago’s Universal Basic Income Task Force and serving on Mayor Rahm Emanuel’s Early Childhood Task Force. Currently, Celena is on the national board of UnidosUS, which partners with 300 affiliates across the country to serve millions of Latinos in the areas of civic engagement, civil rights and immigration, education, workforce and the economy, health, and housing.

Celena’s choice of social work as a profession is not surprising. Her mother, Dr. Ida Roldan, is on the faculty of the Institute for Clinical Social Work in Chicago and maintains a private practice. A trained disaster mental health worker, Ida and Celena have responded to Red Cross disasters together in Puerto Rico and across the United States.

Reflecting on her education and experience at the school, Celena explains:

“Over the recent past, the Red Cross has responded to one of the busiest disaster seasons in history and we are all living through a pandemic unlike any our world experienced in more than 100 years. Through these monumental changes and challenges, I have often thought about the training that I received through the School of Social Work. I have relied greatly on the compassion, reflective listening and learning, and leadership development that I learned through this program. This recognition means so much to me, particularly during this momentous time in our history. Social workers are needed now more than ever, and I am appreciative of the strong foundation I received.”
Margaret Eisenstad, BA ’63, is the founder of Kamishibai For Kids which, using beautifully illustrated cards, is a creative tool to develop reading and writing skills.

Kathleen Bink, BSW ’68, had a 40-year social work career, working primarily in public welfare/child welfare in Wisconsin’s Waukesha and Ozaukee counties in direct service, supervision and management.

Roberta Gassman, MSSW ’72, Honorary Fellow, and Emeritus Board of Visitors Member, has been elected chair of the Madison Community Foundation Board of Governors. MCF works with staff, donors, and partners to invest and leverage its resources to enhance the Madison region through philanthropy and grantmaking.

Debbie Armstrong, MSSW ’73, spent the first part of her career working with persons with developmental disabilities and in school social work. Later she had a private practice. Throughout her career she explains, “I always use the systems theory I learned at the School of Social Work.”

Roger Tepe, MSSW ’73, now retired and volunteering in Boston, had a 40-year social work career including serving as the Director of Door County Human Services in Wisconsin.

James Sampson, MSSW ’73, is “mostly retired” but remains active in a number of non-profit organizations in the Buffalo, NY area. One of those, Buffalo String Works, “delivers world class music education to diverse youth that inspires personal and community transformation.”

Lann Thompson, MSSW ’74, was named Social Work Pioneer by the National Association of Social Workers. This distinguished honor recognizes Lann’s leadership in child welfare, developmental disabilities, and maternal health during his career spanning nearly five decades. Proud of his Native American (Eastern Band Cherokee) heritage, Lann has been involved in Native organizations and events most of his life.

Rabbi Eleanor Pearlman, MSSW ’75, has retired from Congregation Gates of Heaven in Schenectady, NY. As Adjunct Rabbi Emeritus, she will continue to lead classes and visit seniors.

Jane Redfield Yank, MSSW ’75 (and PhD University of Minnesota), recently retired from Healtheast, a hospital system St. Paul. She currently teaches research methods and statistics to MSW students at Walden University.

Kevin Mahoney, PhD ’78, Emeritus Professor of Social Work at Boston University is co-author of Self Direction: A Revolution in Human Services. SUNY Press, June 2021.

Raymond Frey, MSSW ’84, is a program analyst at Polara Health, a mental health clinic in Prescott AZ.

Michael Schultz, BSW ’84 (also EdD), recently joined the State of Vermont’s Department of Children and Family Services as a contract and grants supervisor.

Louise Marcoux, MSSW ’90, retired recently. She was the Director of Religious Education at Unitarian Church of Sharon, MA.

Robert Williams, MSSW ’90, was recently appointed Director of Housing and Human Services in Boulder, CO.

Brenda B. Szumsk, BSW ’94 (MSW University of Denver), is Director of Operations for MST (Multisystemic Therapy), a large international company partnering with organizations to treat at-risk youth.

Joy Baumgartner, MSSW ’99 (also PhD), is an associate professor and Director of the Global Mental Health Institute at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill. She writes, “My training at UW in severe mental illnesses was fantastic and it really set me a great course in my research career.” Gina Miranda Samuels, PhD ’02, Associate Professor at the University of Chicago’s Crown Family School of Social Work, Policy and Practice is the co-author of Multiracial Cultural Attunement published by NASW Press.

Kari Riley, MSW ’06, is working for RSVP Dane County where alum Margie Zutter, BSW ’74 is Director and Mary Stamstad, BSW ’74 recently retired.

Matthew Smith, PhD ’06, Associate Professor of Social Work at the University of Michigan was awarded a $3.1 million grant from the National Institute of Mental Health to develop a virtual simulation to help autistic teens and young adults learn effective ways to interact with customers, coworkers, and supervisors in work settings.

Nkauj Nou Vang-Vue, MSW’08, principal of Madison’s Lake View Elementary School since July 2018, is the Madison School District’s first Hmong American principal. She also oversees the district’s only bilingual Hmong-English immersion program.

Patrice Hutchins, MSW ’10, was named Assistant Principal of East High School in Madison. A life-long resident of Madison, she graduated from East High.
Jael Currie, MSW ’11, named one of Wisconsin’s 51 Most Influential Black Leaders, was elected to the Madison Common Council. Jael was also one of 25 women selected as YWCA USA’s Inaugural Women of Color and Native Women’s Leadership Cohort.

Jannet Arenas Pineda, MSW ’13, a school social worker in Madison, was named a 2021 Women of Distinction by the YWCA, recognizing her as “one of the people in our community who go above and beyond in their efforts to make our world a better place.”

Kristi Wood, MSW ’13, was named to the National Association of Social Workers (NASW) Board of Directors, representing Wisconsin, Michigan, and Indiana. A lecturer at UW-Whitewater, Kristi is also a foster parent trainer for the Wisconsin Child Welfare Professional Development system.

Laura Zimmerman, MSW ’15, was invited to discuss the state of mental health care and Covid on the NPR show 1A, after she suggested that they cover the topic. Laura is a Clinical Specialist at Journey Mental Health Center in Madison.

Lanikque Howard, PhD ’18, was named by President Biden as Director of the U.S. Office of Community Services, Administration for Children and Families. As the OCS Director, she provides leadership and oversight of over $6 billion in mandatory and discretionary grants through six social service and community development programs.

More than 30 school alumni and friends have established endowed scholarships for social work students. These endowments ensure that the scholarships will be awarded in perpetuity. They range from $1000 awards to full tuition scholarships with stipends. All make a difference in helping our students complete their education and do so with less significant debt.

Below are a just a few of the many students awarded scholarships from the school last year.

BETHANY MATSON
Richard E. Schwert Award
(funded by Attic Correctional Services)

JASMYNE SHORT
Joyce Carpenter Degenhart '57 Scholarship

MADELINE BROWN
Joseph and Elaine Wojtowicz Scholarship

MARIE NOFODJI
Heather Milne Southwick '53 Scholarship

YOONA KIM
Irving Piliavin Award

AARON REILLY
Sheldon D. Rose Memorial Scholarship

Additionally, the school awarded full tuition and fees admission scholarships to 32 incoming students last year—thanks to funding from the Harriet Rosenbaum Scholarships, Martha N. Ozawa Scholarships, and the Helen I. Clarke Award.

"We are grateful to be part of that movement and to share the same values and focus of diversity, inclusion and listening to the wisdom and guidance of the communities that have been historically marginalized and oppressed.”

Terri Beck-Engel, MSSW ’80, and David Beck-Engel BS ’79 (Engineering), have been generous supporters of UW-Madison and the Sandra Rosenbaum School of Social Work for many years. They are particularly committed to increasing faculty, staff, and student diversity and to supporting anti-oppressive practice and education to better serve the community. Impressed by the school’s use of their prior gifts focused on these areas, Terri and David recently made a substantial gift to be used over the next five years to support and grow our anti-oppressive practice and diversity, equity, and inclusion initiatives.

Terri, also a graduate of the Spiritual Direction Preparation Program at the Franciscan Spirituality Center in La Crosse, is an artist. David is Vice-Chairman and former President of J. H. Findorff & Sons, one of the Midwest’s leading builders.
Keynote speaker Patrisse Cullors, best-selling author of When They Call You a Terrorist and Co-Creator of the viral Twitter hashtag and movement, #BlackLivesMatter, along with 26 other speakers, addressed anti-racist and abolitionist ideas within social work. The online event over two Fridays drew students, faculty, community social workers, and others from throughout Wisconsin and the U.S. The archived videos of session presentations have also been viewed thousands of times since the conference. This conference is funded entirely through donor support.

Thanks to the generosity of alumni and friends, we are able to enhance opportunities for our students such as:

Providing registration fee support for students to attend UW-Madison’s Summer Institute on Advanced Dementia Care: The Impact of Trauma.

Offering a full-day Anti-Racist Clinical Social Work Training for our mental health focus area students with experts from Speak Up – a Chicago based consulting organization.

Providing copies of Four Hundred Souls: A Community History of African America, 1619-2019, edited by Ibram X. Kendi and Keisha N. Blain, two leading scholars of Black culture, to all students and faculty as part of the school’s annual “Big Read” program.

COLLEAGUES, FRIENDS AND FAMILY ESTABLISH THE VINCE FISH MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP IN FAMILY THERAPY

Long-term Lecturer and graduate of the school, Vince Fish, MSSW ’74 passed away in December 2020. Wanting to honor Vince’s tireless effort to provide state of the art mental health services, especially to underserved populations, more than 40 colleagues, family, and friends established the Vince Fish Memorial Scholarship in Family Therapy. Among his many achievements, Vince was a founding member of the Family Therapy Center of Madison, and was instrumental in creating the UW-Madison’s annual Midwest Conference on Sexual Abuse.

The scholarship will be awarded annually, in perpetuity, to a graduate student pursuing a career in family therapy. If you would like to support the Vince Fish Memorial Scholarship you can do so at: supportuw.org/giveto/FishMemorial
YOUR SUPPORT IS VITAL

During times like these, our general fund, the most flexible fund we have, is critical. Thank you for your needed support.

As we move into the second year as the Sandra Rosenbaum School of Social Work, the school is utilizing the generosity of Joel Berman’s transformative gift in honor of his late wife and our graduate, Sandra. We have awarded dozens of full-tuition scholarships; funded vital diversity and equity projects; and are in the process of increasing PhD student support and named professorships. Joel’s gift will continue to help the school address areas of greatest need.
